

Satem/Kentum IČ,IC/K

 veneti.info/multilingua/english/other-articles/186-satemkentum-ic-ic-k

Written by Petr Jandáček <http://barranca.laschools.net/specials/art/otzi.htm>

If we read in the VENETI First Builders of European Community By Šavli, Bor and Tomažič *P.188, we learn that the ancient Veneti had a letter (character) or letters (characters) which looked like >I if written (customarily) from right to left (like Hebrew) or like I< if written from left to right (like contemporary languages of Europe). This element could be read as an "IC" or as a "K". The dichotomy between Satem and Centum (Kentum) main branches of Indo-European languages appears to stem from this (IC - K) uncertainty of very early (Slavic)-Indo-European experience. This binary interpretation continues to be manifest when one compares modern Slovenian and Czech lexicons (especially as applied to patronymic names, nicknames and animals).

Slovenian - VEVERICA / Czech - VEVERKA == English - SQUIRREL

Slovenian - MEDVEDKA / Czech - MEDVĚDICE / Common Slavic - MEDVEDICA

= English - SHE-BEAR

Slovenian - LISICA / Czech - LIŠKA == English - FOX

Slovenian - BABICA / Czech - BABKA == English - GRANDMA

Slovenian - BOBNIČ / češko/Czech - BUBÍNEK == angleško/English -- EARDRUM

Slovenian - BRUSNICA / Czech - BRUSINKA == English - CRANBERRY

Slovenian - DEVICA / Czech - DÍVKA

/ Slovak-DEVKA == English - MAIDEN, GIRL

Slovenian - KOBILICA / Czech - KOBILKA == English -- GRASSHOPPER

Slovenian - KRATICA / Czech - ZKRATKA == English -- ABBREVIATION

Slovenian - LOPATICA / Czech - LOPATKA == English SHOULDER BLADE

Slovenian - PTICA / Czech - PTAK == English BIRD

Slovenian - IVANIČ / Czech - IVÁNEK,

Slovenian - TOMAŽIČ / Czech - TOMÁŠEK.

Slovenian - JOŽICA / Czech - JOŽKA

Thus, the Slovenian and Czech lexicons are indicative of the central role that Slavic languages (VENETIC) played in the original Centum/Satem dichotomy. If we go back far enough we see that the "fraternal twins": Satem and Centum both come from the Slavic "STO" (100) Cradle.

JANDÁČEI<

translation: PETRI<

*Page 188 " The symbol >I in the inscriptions is often difficult to distinguish whether it represents a k or an ic." VENETI First Builders of European Community - Tracing the History and Language of Early Ancestors of Slovenes

Jožko Šavli, Matej Bor, & Ivan Tomažič 1996 ISBN 0-9681236-0-0

Petr Jandáček 2001, 127 La Senda Rd. LOS ALAMOS New Mexico USA 87544-3819; Tel:(505)672 9562

jandacek@laschools.net